Citizen Sports Fantasy Football for Facebook to Test Ability to Build
Major Business in Social Network Application Category

*Sports Illustrated Support, Seven-Figure Partnerships with AT&T, FinishLine and others
Give Facebook's First Major Fantasy App and Most Robust App Ever A Leg-up in Building Audience Quickly*

SAN FRANCISCO, August 25, 2008 — Citizen Sports Network today said that it has surpassed 200,000 Facebook sign-ups and secured seven figures in sponsorship deals from AT&T, FinishLine and others in advance of its inaugural season of Fantasy Football 2008 on Facebook. This customer and investment combination has strongly positioned Fantasy Football 2008 on Facebook to rank as the largest ever first year fantasy sports game when the NFL season begins on September 4.

Citizen Sports is the first company to launch a major commissioner style fantasy football product on a social network. Launched in July in partnership with Sports Illustrated, the product (www.fbfantasyfootball.com) is the most complex application available on Facebook today, and represents genuine innovation in the incredibly lucrative and fast growing fantasy sports market. The Fantasy Sports Trade Association estimates that 29.9 million people currently play fantasy sports and that fantasy sports has a market impact of $4.48 billion.

“Thousands of third-party applications have been built on Facebook since the launch of the Facebook Platform in early 2007. With the exception of a few, most applications fall dramatically short of engaging users on a level that will attract major blue chip brands like we already have,” said Mike Kerns, founder and CEO, Citizen Sports Network. “As we look to build out a global sports media experience we recognize the incredible value of fantasy sports in that effort.”

All advertising inventory on the application has been sold out since the first week of August and Citizen Sports was actually placed in the unique situation of having to turn away some major brands. This is unique in the application development world where often advertising inventory goes unsold and is incredibly difficult to monetize.

Key features of Citizen Sports Fantasy Football 2008 include free live scoring, custom leagues and scoring settings, multiple draft options, including online, offline and auto-pick, virtual ‘smack talk,’ ‘Easy Button’ line-up arrangement and free projections, analysis and Rotowire player updates.

Fantasy Football 2008 also features a celebrity league comprised of sports writers, former NFL athletes and other noteworthy individuals affiliated with professional sports. One Fantasy Football 2008 user chosen at random will get the chance to compete head to head in this league. Current league participants include:

- Billy Beane, current general manager and minority owner of the Oakland Athletics and former Major League Baseball player
- Peter King, senior writer for Sports Illustrated and TV analyst and reporter for Football Night in America, NBC's Sunday night NFL studio show
- Jim Nantz, is an American sportscaster, known primarily for his work with CBS Sports television
- Michael Lewis, bestselling author of Moneyball, Liar's Poker, The New Thing and The Blind Side
- Brent Jones, tight end who played most of his career with the San Francisco 49ers from (1987 to 1997)
- Ronnie Lott, hall of fame NFL cornerback, free safety and strong safety for the San Francisco 49ers
- Brooklyn Decker, fashion model who appeared in the 2006, 2007 and 2008 Sports Illustrated swimsuit editions
- Jeremy Roenick, player for the NHL's San Jose Sharks and 18-year veteran of the NHL
